

Brooklyn Monthly Snapshot

Market Wide Summary

During April, median price rose 13% year-over-year, driven by sales over $4M in prime neighborhoods such as Park Slope and Williamsburg. Strong activity in South Brooklyn kept the average sale price flat versus a year ago. The market share of sales under $1M increased compared to last year. The average price per square foot declined 11% year-over-year and was the lowest figure since September 2018. Contract activity increased 7% compared to last year and remained level compared to last month due to strong activity in Greenpoint, Carroll Gardens and Cobble Hill. Days on market increased 39% year-over-year but declined 12% compared to March 2019; it still remained above the Brooklyn three-year average. The number of additional new listings declined 16% compared to last year but rose 2% compared to March 2019.

BROOKLYN PRICE TRENDS

Brooklyn Monthly Snapshot

BROOKLYN AVERAGE DAYS ON MARKET

Days on market increased compared to April 2018 and was the highest figure for any April since 2013. The 12% decrease compared to the previous month was a typical seasonal pattern. Over the past three years, days on market has trended upward and the April 2019 figure was more than double April 2016's days on market. This April was the tenth consecutive month that days on market was above the Brooklyn three-year average.

BROOKLYN NEWLY LISTED APARTMENT INVENTORY²

Newly listed apartment inventory was down 16% year-over-year but increased slightly by 2% compared to the previous month. Newly listed apartment inventory during April 2019 was above the Brooklyn three-year average. One reason why newly listed apartment inventory decreased compared to last year was due to fewer new development launches so far this spring.
